

What do I want to learn or understand better?

What is: My knowledge of Scrum is limited. My only experience of something similar is the use of an iterative process in a previous project course where we also used user stories. However this was not Scrum and our group's effort in working with this process was not as high as it could have been.

What might or should be: I would like to get a better understanding of the Scrum work process, the steps within, how it affects the workflow, how the team works together and so on.

A plan for getting from where you are to where you want to be: To get a better knowledge of Scrum I need to be active and take in information during the lectures, but more importantly be engaged in my team's work throughout the project, and all the parts of Scrum we go through and learn through doing.

How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

What is: Since this is the first week of the project and we have not really had a chance to have a proper team meeting or started any work I have not had the chance to help someone, or the entire team in any particular way learn something new. I do have the experience of having been part of a group programming project(s) earlier.

What might or should be: I would like to use the things I've learned from previous projects to help the team during this project by recognizing what problems can arise during the course of the work and also share what I think have worked well previously.

A plan for getting from where you are to where you want to be: When I notice that we are moving in a direction or doing something that I have experienced not working I should share that with the group. Similarly, I should share what I've earlier noticed works in situations that may arise if applicable.

What is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?

What is: We have not started working with the project or Scrum so my contribution at the moment is none.

What might or should be: I should be a part of the Scrum workflow and fulfill my role within it to the best of my abilities.

A plan for getting from where you are to where you want to be: I should fulfill the tasks that my role within the group and Scrum entail as well as not be afraid to ask for help when there is something I don't understand or that I need help with in order to not hinder the group and project as a whole.

What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

What is: We have not started work with the project in any real way, and not started working on our social contract at the time of writing this reflection, but I have reminded my team of the deliverables, both as a group (planning a time with the group for us to sit down and write the social contract) and individually (reflections), for this week.

What might or should be: I should be available to contribute to the team reflection every week. I should finish my tasks that I'm given (or that I take upon myself) every sprint to the best of my ability.

A plan for getting from where you are to where you want to be: Whenever we need to write our team reflection I should be a part of planning that with the whole team as well as contribute to the writing of the document itself. For my tasks, I should, like above, complete my tasks to the best of my ability and importantly voice any concerns that may arise or ask for help if I need it in order to finish the tasks on time.
