

What do I want to learn or understand better?

What is: I have gotten a better understanding of the Scrum workflow through exercises and lectures. I have learnt about the need of “slicing the cake” but I feel that I have some difficulty applying it in practice

What might or should be: I would like to better understand how to divide user stories or features in general into small vertical slices.

A plan for getting from where you are to where you want to be: I should discuss with my teammates how to divide our project idea into small vertical slices when we have our project idea set. Applying it in practice in our project should help me get a better understanding.

How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

What is: Similar to last week, our work with the actual project has not really started yet so the ability to help people learn new stuff has been limited. During the process of discussing project ideas I have shared some things that I have run into in previous projects.

What might or should be: Because of my experience working with git previously I feel that I should be able to help those who have not worked with it as much.

A plan for getting from where you are to where you want to be: Talking with my teammates, understanding their knowledge of git and best practices working with version control, and then helping them with parts they feel that they do not understand.

What is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?

What is: Same as last week: We have not started working with the project or Scrum so my contribution at the moment is none.

What might or should be: I should be a part of the Scrum workflow and fulfill my role within it to the best of my abilities.

A plan for getting from where you are to where you want to be: I should fulfill the tasks that my role within the group and Scrum entail as well as not be afraid to ask for help when there is something I don't understand or that I need help with in order to not hinder the group and project as a whole.

What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

What is: Our deliveries this week have been to come up with and submit a project scope with a description and visual mockup. I have been active during the discussions and meetings with the team. We did not finalize a project scope this week but will hopefully have that done this monday.

What might or should be: Next week I should be active during the discussions that our team has. Our deliveries will be to submit a team reflection so I should be active during the oral reflection as well as help put relevant conclusions down on paper (digitally). We should also decide our project on monday.

A plan for getting from where you are to where you want to be: Continue sharing my opinion during our meetings and reflections and contribute to our shared document of the team reflection and voice my opinion on the type of project we should do.
