

We have not yet properly started and are currently in the phase of getting to terms with the course, schedule, expectations, workload etc. I'd wished that we created a concept for the weekly effort schema, things like; when do we meet, where do we meet, who oversees what administrative roles, etc.

I will support the group by pushing that we create this weekly template and will do all or most work to get it rolling. Creating the workplaces, git, Trello, docs, and just stepping up when things need to be done this starting week so that we can start with the real part of the project as quickly and easy as possible.

Since we haven't started with scrum or other roles will I simply stay open minded and be ready to take part if needed to.

This week and the next do I wish to stay positive and help my team by facilitating them with the standard application and other 'starting group project' resources.
