

Individual Reflection 7

I need to study the model a bit more to understand what classes I'm supposed to use. Currently I'm trying to imitate a class that shouldn't be imitated. I also need to practice more with the scrum board and user story creations. I have a habit of creating too large user stories that take too much time, rather than splitting them.

The faster I conclude my part of the project, the more people will be able to take part of it and help us create more functions and parts.

Other than creating user stories and preparing tasks, I try bringing up problems and leading discussion about project problem solving. I also speak for the stakeholder, trying to show his reasoning and how he wants things to be done.

I'm almost done with the Recommended tab. I have had free control over that part of the project and can soon finish it completely. I also help with decisions regarding the design since I speak for the stakeholder.
