Customer Value and Scope

- There have been no major changes regarding this since the last time we reflected on it so we do not feel the need to discuss it this week.

Social Contract and Effort

- your social contract, i.e., the rules that define how you work together as a team, how it influenced your work, and how it evolved during the project (this means, of course, you should create one in the first week and continuously update it when the need arrives)There is a survey (Links to an external site.) you can use for evaluating https://forms.gle/NP8V6DU8aTofgF7w7 how the team is perceiving the process and if it is used by several teams it will also help you to assess if your team is following a general pattern or not.

The social contract has been followed. No major conflicts have appeared, and all discussions have ended in constructive conclusions. We feel no need to reformulate the social contract at this time as we feel that it is followed as intended.

- the time you have spent on the course and how it relates to what you delivered (so keep track of your hours so you can describe the current situation)

We have not explicitly tracked our individual hours. All members of the group have, although, put in reasonable amounts of effort. At the end of each sprint, all members describe what they have accomplished during the sprint and approximately how much time it has taken.

Design decisions and product structure

There have been no changes worthy of reflection since this topic was last reflected upon.

Application of Scrum

Since we reflected upon this last sprint we want to give it a little more time until the next reflection so that the improvements are clearer.
